

POLICY

The College recognizes that some subject matter may be or become controversial and that at all times the faculty of the College shall use its best professional judgement in presenting such material to the student.

In those instances where course or curriculum material is controversial, it is the intent of the College that within the parameters of the 1968 NEA Code of Ethics and the 1940 AAUP Statement of Principles on Academic Freedom and tenure, faculty be free to teach the truth of their discipline as they see it, present alternative points of view and provide students with freedom to challenge and question.
